WHAT IS INFANT MENTAL HEALTH?

Your emotional health and well-being are very important to you. It is also a crucial part of your child's development. Understanding your child's social and emotional life, along with strengthening their relationships with important people in their lives, will help insure your child stays on track developmentally. A "secure base" of loving, caring and nurturing relationships in early childhood provides the foundation to form similar relationships later in life.

The focus of our infant mental health program is from ages birth through four. Our infant mental health experts will help you to understand your child's temperament, caregiver-infant relationship, and the broader environment in which these relationships exist. We focus extensively on helping infants and young children develop self-worth, self-confidence and self-regulation. We also offer help in coping with stress or disruptions in relationships that can take a child off track developmentally. For example, supporting young children experiencing separation and trauma is an important focus of our program. Most importantly, we help ensure healthy brain development.

WHAT OUR EXPERTS CAN DO FOR YOU?

At the Center for Neuropsychology, Learning & Development, we offer assessment and treatment by professionals who have recognized credentialing, training and expertise in working with young children and their families.

Our comprehensive assessments can help pinpoint and diagnose:

- Developmental concerns with meeting milestones.
- Speech and language concerns impacting communication.
- Cognitive concerns with thinking and learning.
- Emotional concerns with regulating feelings.
- Relationship or social concerns including identifying Autism Spectrum Disorder

We offer state of the art treatment including:

- Neurobehavioral Attachment Parenting Model
- Consultation and education
- Parenting Guidance – how to manage challenging behaviors or temperament.
- Child Parent Psychotherapy
- Speech and Language Therapy

Remember- Early prevention and treatment is most beneficial and helps avoid more serious difficulties later in life.
